

The Third Conditional

if + past perfect, + would have + past participle would have + past participle + if + past perfect

We use the third conditional when talking about events that have already happened. This is used when it is impossible for the condition to be fulfilled as the time for it to happen has already passed.

- If I had started earlier, I would have finished the work by now. Or:
- I would have finished the work by now if I had started earlier.

Exercises: Be sure to use the contracted form of the verb i.e. 'hadn't' rather than 'had not'.
